

Electronic waste, e-waste, e-scrap: discarded electrical or electronic equipment and devices. Electronic waste is extremely harmful to the environment and poses a serious risk to the health and welfare of people, animals and an entire eco-system. On October 23, 2009, Wisconsin passed a bill that prohibits all forms of electronic waste from being incinerated or entering community landfills. The legislation requires all e-waste to be dropped off at a registered recycling center. The following local businesses are state certified to properly handle e-waste products.
